Although the greatbulk of the evidence collected for the defense was rules out by Judge B., yet the opening on that slde by ISAIAH T. WILLIAMS, eq., gives a good idea of its character and of the grounds of our diseasem of the New York legislation of 1860, its engineers, and their instruments. The rulings of Judge BACON and the comments thereon by JOHN K. PORTER, esq., of Albany, deserve and will commend the attention of lawyers and jurists. And whoever wants to see chatever can be said sgalust the defendant in this suit by bitter positical and general adversary, who knows that he is not to be sowered, must be graffied with the summing up for the plaintiff by the Hon HENRY A. FOSTER. The crossion of the defendant by the Hon. CHAS. B. SEDG-WICK, likewise, presents some noteworthy aspects. As posuits are less common than formerly, and as the legislation of 1860 is a subject of enduring interest, we believe many will find this pamphlet worth reading and preserving.

Author of "Rab and His Friends," "Horse Subsecive," &c.
1 volume, 12mo. 4 1 50.

The author of "Rab and His Friends" scarcely needs an introduction to American readers. By this time many have learned to agree with a writer in the North British Review that and also for general use. I am selling for $45 oper 1,000; at "Rab" is, all things considered, the most perfect prose narrative since Lamb's "Reamond Gray."

"Of all the John Browns, commend us to Dr. John Brown, the physician, the man of genius, the humorest, the student of men, women and dogs. By means of two beautiful volumes he has given the public a share of his by-hours, and more pleasent hours it would be difficult to find in any life. Dr. Brown's master-piece is the story of a dog called 'Rab.' The tale move from the most tragic pathos to the most reckless humor, and could not have been written but by a man of genius. Whether it moves to laughter or to tears, it is perfect in its way, and immortalizes its author."
